

Title of Motion Picture

Pharaoh's Tomb.

Produced and Manufactured by
PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Copyrighted

Between drinks of See-Stars Rye, Farmer Al Falfa reads the latest news about excavations at King Tut-Ankh-Amen's Tomb in Egypt. So when the farmer falls asleep, shortly after, he naturally dreams of the days of long ago on the banks of the Nile. Al equips himself with hunting togs and a gun. Perched upon the hump of a large camel Al rides over the desert sands. He observes two elephants swinging their joined trunks around so that a baby elephant can jump rope. Al is a marksman and soon shoots away all but the trunks of the two elephants. The little elephant continues to jump but suddenly takes to flight with the trunks. When his camel quenches its thirst at a lake Al is sent way up in the air as the playful beast fills the hump with water. From this height Al sees Rex Lion and Milton Mouse upon a sea-saw. He shoots and hits Rex, whereupon the lion gives chase to Al and Fido. Suddenly, Fido turns around, giving chase to the lion. The beast runs into a hole in the ground. Fido grabs at the animal's tail. Al jumps down from the camel and helps Fido. They both pull at the tail which turns out to be a rope tied to a bottle of King Foot and Come In's best brew. Al and Fido imbibe of the beverage and suddenly see an Egyptian standing before them. Both are surprised but show interest when the stranger beckons for them to follow him. He leads them across the desert, to the Tomb of King Foot and Come In. The doors open at his command and Al and Fido follow. Then the Egyptian disappears. The visitors start down a series of giant steps. On the way down, an inscribed figure on the wall pours a pitcher of water upon Al. Then a snake grabs him and a boot suddenly kicks the pair--sending them to the bottom of the flight. They fall in front of an open window. Peeking through, they behold a diving girl disporting upon a spring board. A mystic bird releases a trap door beneath their feet and Farmer and Dog fall down a chute. Landing upon a pile of money in a chamber of gold and jewels, Al is overjoyed. He picks up a shovel and fills up a chariot standing near by. Then he jumps up on the load and drives away through a tunnel. Reaching the surface, Al passes the Sphinx. Dismayed at seeing all the wealth being carried away, the Sphinx yells, "Police." The call is heard at headquarters and the Egyptian cops march out to the chase. Farmer Al lashes his trio of hobby horses as the police fall upon him. Suddenly he awakens from his dream and finds himself pulling at Fido's tail. As an apology to the dog, he blames his action upon the "licker" by reiterating the moral: "The stuff we get nowadays, ain't what it used to be."

This document is from the Library of Congress
“Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection,
1912-1977”

Collections Summary:

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004>

Class M Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002>

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress